Seniors – Adding Life to Years (SALTY) Project

a major national research initiative examining end of life in long term care

The purpose of the Seniors – Adding Life to Years (SALTY) research project is to add quality to late life for people living in residential long term care and for their caregivers, including family, friends, staff and volunteers who support their care. To accomplish this the project is organized in four interrelated research streams: Monitoring Care Practices (Stream 1); Mapping Care Relationships (Stream 2); Evaluating Innovative Practice (Stream 3); and Examining Policy Context (Stream 4).

The four-year project, launched in April 2016, is funded through a Team Late Life Issues Grant from the Canadian Institutes of Health Research with partner funding from the Michael Smith Foundation of Health Research, the Nova Scotia Health Research Foundation and the Alzheimer's Society of Canada. It is being conducted at sites in British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Nova Scotia by a team of 50 established and emerging researchers, decision makers, clinicians and resident and caregiver representatives. Dr. Janice Keefe, PhD, Chair/Professor of Family Studies and Gerontology, Mount Saint Vincent University, Nova Scotia, is leading this multi-disciplinary, multi-sectoral team. This project is using a health services research design with multiple methods and an integrated knowledge translation model to privilege the voices of those who will be most influenced by the work. For more information on the project visit www.SALTYltc.ca

We are seeking candidates for 2, two-year Postdoctoral fellowships to begin in April 2018.

General Project Fellowship: This fellowship will support knowledge translation, dissemination (manuscripts, presentations) and grant development for the overall SALTY Project. The successful candidate will work closely with the Scientific Lead, Dr. Janice Keefe and her national research team to complete key project deliverables and will be located at Mount Saint Vincent University under her direction.

Stream 4 Policy Fellowship: This fellowship will directly support SALTY Stream 4 activities examining policies that inform promising approaches in long term care. The successful candidate will support policy analysis, knowledge translation, dissemination (manuscripts, presentations) and grant development. They will be under the academic supervision of the Scientific Lead and Stream 4 Co-Lead Investigator Dr. Janice Keefe and will work closely with the other Stream 4 Co-Lead Investigators, Heather Cook and Dr. Deanne Taylor. This fellowship may be located at either Mount Saint Vincent University or Interior Health, Kelowna, BC.

Applications are invited from PhD graduates for these positions to start in April 2018. Applicants will have an excellent academic record, familiarity with multiple methods and a publication record for their level of career. Applicants for the Stream 4 Policy Fellowship will have training with policy analysis. The successful applicants will have strong interpersonal and organizational abilities and excellent written and oral communication skills. The incumbents will participate fully in research and related scholarly activities, and are expected to work closely and cooperatively with the research team.

Interested applicants from the social sciences, health and other relevant disciplines should submit an application consisting of a cover letter and a curriculum vitae to the SALTY Project Manager, Nova Scotia Centre on Aging, Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax NS B3M 2J6 (SALTY@msvu.ca) (phone 902-457- 6235; fax 902-457-6226). Applications are being accepted immediately and submissions will be received until suitable candidates are found.

Mount Saint Vincent University is committed to the principles of employment equity and encourages applications from all qualified candidates including women, aboriginal persons, other racially visible persons, and persons with disabilities. All qualified candidates are encouraged to apply; however, priority will be given to Canadians and permanent residents. We thank you for your interest in employment at the Mount and advise that only those candidates invited to an interview will be contacted.
